- Where can one find the certain teaching of the Church on this matter?

In the Anti-modernist Oath that, until 1967, all priests were obliged to pronounce before their ordination:

I hold with certainty and sincerely confess that faith is not a blind sentiment of religion welling up from the depths of the subconscious under the impulse of the heart and the motion of a will trained to morality; but faith is a genuine assent of the intellect to truth received by hearing from an external source. By this assent, because of the authority of the supremely truthful God, we believe to be true that which has been revealed and attested to by a personal God, our Creator and Lord.

12) Can the Faith change?

According to modernist doctrine the Faith can change, for dogmas are only the expression of a sentiment of interior faith and of a religious need. They thus need to be adapted and formulated in a new manner when religious sentiments and needs change.

If, however, as the Church teaches, dogmas express the truths of the Faith in an infallible manner, it is evident that they cannot be changed, for what was true yesterday cannot be false today and vice versa. As truth is immutable, so is the true Faith. Thus St. Paul writes: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach a gospel to you besides that which we have preached to you, let him be anathema" (Gal. 1:8). "Jesus Christus heri et hodie ipse et in saecula—Jesus Christ yesterday, and today, and the same for ever" (Heb. 13:8).

- Isn't there progress in the Faith?

Progress in the doctrine of the Faith is possible only in the sense that the truths of faith are better understood and explicated. Such a development was predicted by Jesus Christ for His Church when He said: "But the Paraclete, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, He will teach you all things, and bring all things to your mind, whatsoever I shall have said to you" (Jn. 14:26).

- Doesn't the Holy Ghost teach new truths to the Church?

Revelation ended with the death of the last Apostle.⁶ Since then, the Holy Ghost does not teach new truths, but rather makes the Church enter ever more profoundly into the truth brought by Christ. Thus revealed truths that played only a secondary role in the life of
